

PRINT SHOP EXHIBIT

The Willimantic Linen Company and American Thread Company printed their own labels for shipping boxes, display packages, and thread spools. Keeping as much of the production line as possible in-house, a strategy known as vertical integration, saved on expenses. To illustrate this, the Museum set up a Print Shop Exhibit in one corner of the Factory Floor Exhibit in the Jonathan Dugan Building.

